That the orders signed by him were always looked on both by Mr. Leighton and himself, as heing merely vouchers for the godownman, and liable to revision by the firm at any time before the delivery of the goods. That the orders in question were issued on representation made by the Compradore, merely as memoranda of the sale. Considering the orders worthless and scarcely believing that the Compradore had in reality sold the rice. he made no entry in the books, beyond the usual memo in the godown order book. He also deposed that the Compradore never reported the receipt of any money whatever in payment for this rice until the beginning of August, when he stated that he had received Taels 5,000 bargain money, which was charged to his account, and that H. I here reproduce what I wrote of it when alluding to the policy of China (in 1860.) as follows:

· That the system of Government—the policy of China, when administered in integrity, was practically successful for a remarkable period, is true: and that it attained under successive Rulers, guided by the wisdom of the Sages, to a point of remarkable efficiency, considering the extent and diversity of the Empire, is also true; -but having reached its culminating point of officiency several centuries ago, its inherent vices have since gradually undermined it, until there is rather, a tradition and a dream of past greatness to form the slender thread holding Prince and People together than any real and tangible basis of authority: The bond between them has not had enough of the vital principle of mutuality in it, and hence from friction has been weakened.
